How do you study well at college? You can do it like this. Find a quiet place to study, which might be a library, a park, a coffee shop or even your own dorm. Be sure to avoid any areas with a lot of people. Read your textbooks carefully. Don't simply skim through the material quickly. You must make sure that you really understand what you are reading. Make a schedule of your daily classes, meals and other activities. Stick to this schedule as much as possible to ensure enough time for learning. Finally, take careful notes in your classes and create small cards to memorize information such as vocabulary terms for tests. You can take them out freely to review when you have a few spare minutes.

Alice is a disabled student at a college. She met an unexpected accident at the age of 12. She lost her right leg and has been in a wheelchair for 6 years. Alice is a bright girl who majors in Software Design. She likes to write poetry and stories in her diary so modern literature is her favorite course. Over the years, her school attendance record is almost 100 percent. "I don't have to tell her what to do," says her mother. "She looks after herself, physically and spiritually." Every Friday, Alice as a volunteer goes downtown to help run a youth club. She has traveled to Australia and Thailand during vacation with her friends. She does not feel she has missed anything apart from sports.

As can be seen from the chart, the past 4 years have witnessed dramatic changes in the number of college students using cell phones in class from 2010 to 2013. In 2010, 86% of college students seldom or never used their cell phones in class, while the figure has dropped considerably to 23% in 2013. It is obvious from the chart that college students tend to prefer their cell phones in class rather than study.

I think the reasons are as follows. To start with, with the rapid development of economy and digital technology, college students are able to afford cell phone expenses. Secondly, college students can use cell phones to download, access and read course materials. What's more, in this competitive society, college students are usually under great stress. Cell phones with multifunction can bring them relaxation at any time. Last but not the least, students are aware that phone use is frowned upon in class, but the main purpose of students looking at their phones in class is for time, texting, checking emails or social networks. They cannot resist the temptation of mobile phones.

In my point of view, cell phones are a serious source of distraction in college class and a potential source of cheating. Using cell phones can adversely affect students' concentration in class. College students should be more attentive in class. It's high time that some effective measures be taken to solve this problem. Students are not allowed to take their cell phones into classroom. Teachers should make their classes more vivid to catch students' attention and try to increase 'students' engagement in class activities, which may be the possible solution to the phenomena.

As can be seen from the chart, littering is the most common bad behavior that irks movie-goers, which reaches 40%. Loud ringtone is the second kind of bad behavior people hate, reaching 30%, higher than smoking in cinemas and taking up too much space in the chairs, with each reporting 15% and 10% respectively. Moreover, some people bring their noisy children to the cinema, which is also bad behavior annoying others and almost takes 5%.

Since we know these bad phenomena, why don't we think about the reasons? Strictly speaking, lacking of public consciousness is the main reason. Moreover, these people are not concerned with their neighbor, neither do they pay respect for others. Their instinct for being selfish emerges in public places. In conclusion, all the behavior mentioned above may disturb others when they are focusing on movies in cinemas.

To my point of view, there are at least three ways we could avoid these occurring. Firstly, some relevant regulations may be carried out to prevent movie-goers from bringing non-theater food into the video hall. Besides, movie-goers should remember to take their own garbage outside the video hall and throw them into the trash. Secondly, when it comes to loud ringtone, smoking and taking up too much space, I think everyone has responsibility of maintaining order especially in public places. Switch your cell phone to vibrating mode. Do not smoke and take up too much space when watching movies in cinemas. Last but not least, watch out for your children when they are out in public. If all of us behave well, who will complain?

In the past, you may have thought or heard that kids are either good in sports or academics, but not both. You may also consider a child as either a “brain” or a “jock(运动员).” This distinction is often no longer the case. Actually, kids can excel in both sports and academics. Sports and academics often complement each other. Physical activities influence kids in positive ways. By participating in sports, kids not only become healthier, they can also become smarter. According to a survey by Live Science, children who participate in youth sports or physical activities would have greater academic performances. Football is the most popular sport in the world. It is estimated that around 250 million people play regularly while millions more watch the game on television. In the UK, teams such as Manchester United and Chelsea compete in the Premier League. Football has a vocabulary of its own. A game of football is known as a football match. The match kicks off when the referee blows his whistle and the ball is kicked for the first time. The aim of the game is to score more goals than the other team. The referee makes sure that both teams play by the rules. If the ball goes out of the sides of the pitch, he gives a throw in. If the ball leaves the end of the pitch, a corner is given. When a player commits a foul, the referee may give the other team a free kick or even a penalty. In extreme cases, the referee may send off a player by giving him a red card.

As we can see from the chart, nowadays most college students think taking exercise is important and like to do exercise. There are 15.25% college students taking exercise every day. 35.59% of them take exercise two times a week, and 25.42% students do exercise two or three times a month. However, there are still some college students seldom attending exercise activities. Those who seldom take exercise in a semester take up 20.34% of all. The rest proportion takes up 3.39%.

I think there exist several reasons which can result in the phenomena. To start with, there are a few college students taking exercise every day thanks to their interest in sports but the percentage is not satisfying. More college students have not formed the habit of doing sports in their early years. They don't like taking exercise activities in their spare time. Secondly, many college students seldom take part in sports activities because they believe it will waste much of their time and their study will be influenced. What's more, there are also a number of college students born with being very lazy, and they would rather play computer games or just sleep in dormitory than walk out to do some aerobics. Indeed, it is unwise to keep distance from taking exercise because exercise can benefit us in many ways.

In my point of view, we can benefit a lot from doing moderate sports if time permits. Firstly, participation in sports will build up people's self-confidence, which is an important part of emotional development. Secondly, taking part in team and individual sports is a great way to get in shape and help prevent serious illnesses. Thirdly, taking exercise will help people cooperate and communicate with each other. Such comprehensive social skills as communicating, sharing and empathizing can be improved in the process of doing sports especially with a team. In conclusion, it is a stupid choice to be away from taking exercise.

Suggested keys:

1. As is obviously showed in the above pie diagram, hip-hop is the most popular with the college students in 2013. Almost half of the students interviewed prefer it to any other forms of dances. However, the rest three forms of dances seem to be less popular. Among the dances, 25% of the students would choose tap and 19% choose folk dance. The lowest percentage is tango, which is the choice of 15% students.

2. Some reasons may account for their preference. Firstly, hip-hop is a good way to relax and amuse themselves by hugely reducing their stress. The young students in modern society are facing great pressure, and its freestyle in nature just gives the dancers freedom to move as what they like. Secondly, this special type of dance is fashionable and efficient to make them stronger and healthier. Continuous dancing in this way can tone their muscles as well as enhance their flexibility. Finally, it encourages each dancer to give their best regardless of others' judgments.

3. From the above we can come to the conclusion that hip-hop is a good way to spend our spare time at college because it can bring us more than entertainment. It also offers the opportunity to make many friends and a totally view to explore the colorful world. For those who would rather stay in dormitory surfing the internet for a whole day, it's high time that they should escape from computers and enjoy the happiness which hip-hop brings us. So just dance like no one's watching!

Scripts:

The worst thing a foreigner can do is to disrespect the people or customs of a country. Obviously, the locals will get mad at you and you'll be giving them a bad (or even worse) impression. Get to know the customs of the land and then do your best to abide by them. Also, treat everyone you meet with great respect. People who see that you are respecting them and their traditions are more likely to offer you a hand if you need assistance during your trip. You'll have a much better time if you show people the attitude they deserve. So, remember to dress properly for the region, act courteously and just don't make a fool out of yourself on the trip.

Scripts:

Last summer vacation, my family and I went to Qingdao by train. There was always sunshine and fresh air, which made us so comfortable. We went to the seaside. The sea was as blue as the sky. Bathing in the sunshine on the beach was really enjoyable. I also picked up a lot of colorful shells with my little sister. We bought many interesting souvenirs, and I was planning to send them to my friends. We tasted many foods there, such as fish, prawn, and so on. They are very delicious. Then we lived in a clean and tidy hotel, and the price was not so expensive. I like Qingdao very much because it is such a beautiful and interesting place.

The diagram shows us the number of visitors visiting the three museums in London in the summer of 2013. There are the most visitors going to the British museum from June to September. The number fluctuates between 500,000 and 750,000. While the Science Museum and the Natural History Museum received fewer visitors. The number of people who visited the Science Museum dropped gradually from 400,000 to 300,000 from June to August then rose to 450,000 in September. We can see that the trend for the Natural History Museum remains stable. There was a sharp drop in visitors from June to July. The number remains stable in August and then increased steadily in September.

Generally speaking, the diagram reveals an upward trend of the tourism in Britain. The reasons are as follows. To start with, people are increasingly aware of what travel means to them. Meanwhile, the increased income and convenient traffic have been prompting large number of residents to go on an overseas journey. Furthermore, the government's positive attitude towards tourism, which in turn encourages the fulfillment of the infrastructure, also contributes to the prosperity.

Moreover, people who go abroad are usually in a position to experience the exotic cultures and unique scenery in the region. Thus, they are sure to visit some famous scenic spots and the three museums have long been renowned, which will definitely help them attract a great number of visitors. What's more, museum is a contacted world of the local history, culture and customs. Travelers who visit the British Museum can have a glimpse of the world's most precious relics while the visitors to the Natural History Museum are able to get a vivid impression on the natural development. Therefore, the British Museum received the highest number of visitors.

In conclusion, the prosperity of tourism is beneficial both financially and culturally. There is no doubt that the consumption could bring tremendous profits to service industry, such as hotels, restaurants, traffics and etc. Consequently, the whole industry expands and develops, employments increases, which in turn results in a surplus of the currency and rise of the economy. On the other hand, overseas tours offer an opportunity for intercultural communication.

Isn't food one of life's greatest pleasures? There is so much delicious food in the world. You could spend a whole lifetime eating a different dish every day. My taste in food keeps changing. Sometimes my favorite is a dessert, but then I change my mind and go for a spicy curry. It's great that countries have so many different dishes. Do you think your national dish is the best? Nowadays we have to be careful about what we eat. Fast food is not good for us. We need to focus more on healthy food.

I think fish are one of the most interesting creatures on the planet. They are absolutely fascinating. I love their different shapes, colors, social behavior, everything. I can watch tropical fish in my aquarium for hours. Even the tiny little fish are so beautiful. When I go to the city aquarium, I can spend a whole morning or afternoon looking at the fish. I don't have a favorite fish. I must confess that after watching the movie "Finding Nemo" I do now like clownfish. As well as looking at fish, I also love eating them. Tuna is my favorite, especially raw tuna. When I visit Japan, the first thing I do is to go to a sushi restaurant. Raw fish is so much tastier than cooked fish. And it is probably a lot healthier.

The pie chart shows us that the types of fast food that the teenagers prefer in the USA. In general, more teenagers prefer hamburgers, pizza and French fries among which hamburgers are the most popular food as they account for the largest proportion of all, taking up 33 percent. Pizza is the second most popular fast food, and this makes up 26 percent of the total survey. There are also many teenagers loving to eat French fries, which represent 22 percent of all surveyed. Only 9 and 7 percent of teenagers choose fried chicken and tacos respectively so they are less popular than the former ones. The least popular fast food in this survey is sushi. Only 3 percent of teenagers prefer this kind of food.

Why do teenagers in America love fast food so much? Firstly, they feel fast food tastes and smells much more delicious than some healthy food, which leads to their interest in fast food. Secondly, it is very convenient to prepare and carry. In addition, they don't take long to eat. Thirdly, fast food is much cheaper.

All in all, eating fast food is unhealthy for teenagers. They are growing up and they need more nutritious food. Making their food healthy and varied might be the best solutions to avoid teenagers eating too much fast food. If children eat fast food successively in their teens, they will be more likely to become obese and probably they will suffer from many diseases caused by being obese. So moderate fast food in their diet should be appreciated.

Thanksgiving Day is a national holiday celebrated in the United States. It is on the fourth Thursday of November. On that day, American people always give thanks for God's blessings during the year. Thanksgiving Day is usually a family reunion day. Family members always travel a long distance to spend this holiday at home together. Preparing and eating a large meal is a central part of most Thanksgiving celebrations. Turkey, pumpkin pie and Indian pudding are traditional food. After the holiday meal, many people choose to watch American football games on television. Because of the high viewer ship, American football has been regarded as another American Thanksgiving tradition.

Every nation has its own festivals. Those festivals give people a chance to enjoy themselves. The Spring Festival is the major holiday in China and Christmas is the most important in the western world.

On the one hand, the Spring Festival and Christmas have much in common. Both are prepared beforehand to create a happy atmosphere and both include a family reunion with a big feast. On the other hand, the two are different in some respects. The Chinese Spring Festival has no religious background while Christmas has something to do with God. Besides, the Chinese pay a visit to each other for greeting while the Westerners send each other Christmas cards.

Nowadays, many Chinese begin to celebrate Christmas, and Westerners go to Chinatowns to enjoy Spring Festival activities there, perhaps for fun and out of curiosity.

2. 白色情人节起源于1977年一次失败的棉花糖推销活动。那年日本糖果协会急需推销糖果, 最好的办法就是创造一个节日。于是, 商人们把白色情人节定义为情人节的“回应日”或者“报答日”。

As is clearly shown in the chart that great changes have taken place in the way people spent their holidays from 2011 to 2013. The proportion of traveling was increasing rapidly from 27% to 61% while that of staying at home and visiting relatives or friends were decreasing year by year from 39% to 17% and from 28% to 15% respectively, apart from the other ways remaining stable. It's obvious that traveling is replacing other ways as a new trend of spending holidays

There are some reasons which can account for are the phenomena. To begin with, with the development of economy, people earn much more money than they used to, making it possible for them to afford to go traveling. In addition, people are aware of the importance of getting well-informed about the outside world to broaden their horizons. Last but not least, by traveling outside, people get close to nature, which is good for their health. In brief, more and more people tend to travel on holidays not only to relax themselves, but also pursue a high-quality and colorful life.

As far as I am concerned, I prefer to go traveling rather than stay at home or visit relatives or friends during holidays. For one thing, I am keen on enjoying beautiful scenery and meeting different people. For another, it is widely accepted that the world is becoming a global village. No one could confine himself to his small circle of family or relatives. I have benefited a lot and will benefit even more from traveling during holidays.

manners are an example. Americans use knives, forks and spoons. They are taught to hold the fork in the left hand and the knife on the right while using the knife to cut their food, then to lay the knife aside and switch the fork to the right hand to eat. Europeans, by contrast, are taught to keep the knife in the right hand and the fork in the left at all times. Hello, everyone. Today's topic of the lecture is about the cultural differences between Italian and American youths. Although young Italians and young Americans are similar in many aspects, there are also some huge differences, especially when it comes to work, and meeting places. Most American teens have part-time jobs through high school and college. Youths in Italy tend not to. Young Italians like to enjoy life to the full and feel there will be time to work once they become adults. And another huge difference between Italian and American teenagers is the age they finally fly from the family nest to live alone. They will live at home well into their 30s or until they get married. And the meeting places of the countries' teenagers are still different. When going out, Italians teens tend to meet and gather on the streets of their cities or towns. In the United States, one of the biggest meeting places for teens is the mall.

The chart shows us that the percentage of girls and boys who studied a foreign language from 1984 to 2007 respectively in America. The percentage of girls is much more than that of boys. Meanwhile, the number of students in America studying a foreign language was declining rapidly from 1984 to 2007.

I think there are some reasons which can account for the phenomenon. Firstly, The English language is a widely spoken language. Americans don't tend to travel to other countries although many of them have passports. If Americans do travel to other countries, they tend to go to the English-speaking countries, so learning a second language is not needed. Secondly, In American schools, foreign language testing tends to be focused on reading and writing. There is often no immersion learning. Foreign language learning is often a checklist item for college entry and not an item that will get students rejected from college entry. Thirdly, many American even the less educated Americans have the pride against other languages. Therefore, they don't want to learn a second language and they can't be forced to do it. At last, learning a second language is not usually an advantage in getting a highly-paid job in America. There is often no motivation to learn a foreign language.

From my point of view, as English is widely spoken in the world, it is a world language. To learn a foreign language or not is completely out of one's volition. No one will complain
